

Nahum Gershon focuses on social media, the Internet of Things (and the Internet of Nothing!), biomedical systems, strategic planning, visualization, combining creative expressions with technology and real-time information delivery, presentation & interaction in mobile, wearable as well as traditional devices including how they could improve both organizational environments and our personal & community lives. Nahum Gershon has served in many capacities at the IEEE over the years and is a Senior Principal Scientist at the MITRE Corporation.

Nahum is a well-known community organizer, mentor, and communicator and is quite socially oriented. He has a significant international & multicultural background (citizen of the world, speaking a number of languages), is right and left brain enabled and likes to ask questions. He enjoys life!