

Plenary 4: Brave New Brain-Tech: IEEE Neuroethics Program Development of Guidelines for Use of Neurotechnologies in Practice, Saturday 16 November 2019

Dr. Laura Specker-Sullivan, College of Charleston, USA

Laura Specker Sullivan, a specialist in interdisciplinary and cross-cultural ethics, is an Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the College of Charleston and the Director of Ethics at the Medical University of South Carolina. She has held fellowships at the Center for Bioethics, Harvard Medical School, the Center for Sensorimotor Neural Engineering, University of Washington, the National Core for Neuroethics, University of British Columbia, and the Kokoro Research Center, Kyoto University. She received her PhD in Philosophy from the University of Hawaii at Manoa. She is the former chair of the Neuroethics Affinity Group for the American Society for Bioethics and Humanities and is a current member of the Philosophy and Medicine committee of the American Philosophical Association.