

Plenary 1: Sustainable Development – Addressing Societal Challenges, Friday 15 November 2019

Dr. Özge Karadag Caman, CSD, Earth Institute, Columbia University

Dr. Özge Karadag Caman works as a researcher at the Center for Sustainable Development (CSD) of the Earth Institute at Columbia University in the City of New York. She also holds an associate professor of public health title in Turkey with over 12 years of experience in different higher education settings.

Dr. Karadag Caman earned her medical degree at Istanbul University, and her MSc and PhD Degrees in Public Health at Hacettepe University in Turkey. She also holds a postgrad degree in health promotion from the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine.

Dr. Karadag Caman has more than 15 years of experience working in multicultural and multidisciplinary teams to conduct research, develop public health policies and programs for different vulnerable/disadvantaged groups, such as young people, refugee/migrant populations, people living with HIV, and persons with mental or physical disabilities. She worked as a consultant for UNFPA, UNICEF, UNAIDS, UNHCR, IOM, WHO, and EU as well as for ministries, and civil society organizations in different national and international projects. Her main research interests are vulnerable/ disadvantaged populations and their access to health care, health promotion and education, migrant/refugee health, community mental health, stigma and discrimination, community participation and sustainable development.